

Christine Occhino: Biography

Professionals in the music industry describe Christine as “incredibly talented...with an innate musicality” and “exciting to watch and listen to.” Christine is currently a vocal performance and music business student (on scholarship) at the prestigious Berklee College of Music in Boston. A singer, actor, model and dancer, she has performed in TV, videos, print ads, fundraisers, nightclubs, with live bands as well as acted in theatre and film, including a club scene in a feature film with Robert DeNiro, Al Pacino and Curtis Jackson. In 2010, she has been a featured headliner at Harpers Ferry Nightclub in Boston.

Christine has worked with top hip-hop producers and been vocally trained by renowned industry professionals from New York City to Boston. She is currently recording and co-writing pop, hip-hop and R&B originals with producers and songwriters. Besides her own demo, she has recorded vocals for rock and hip hop demos and written lyrics, music, and vocals for rap/hip-hop artists. Christine works with a Boston music management-consulting agency and with the Boston Hip-Hop Alliance as an artist relations associate and artist/client liaison. She is also the promotional director for The Berklee Groove student newspaper, a promotional model for 3 major marketing agencies, and was selected as the promotions and marketing coordinator for the Boston Prudential Center’s Berklee Spring Fest 2010 outdoor music festival.

Born and raised in Stamford, Connecticut, Christine studied violin and guitar and earned first place honors in several talent shows. She has been a featured soloist in choirs, performed at Disney, earned lead roles in musicals, and sang the National Anthem for sports events in stadiums and arenas. Christine has taken dance for sixteen years including ballet, jazz, tap, hip-hop, and Latin resulting in appearances in professional theatres and television.
